SENATOR MERRIMON His Election and Political Views.

His Interview with an Editor of the Journal

[SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL.] RALEIGH, Dec. 3-8 P. M. The renomination of Governor Vance and the subsequent election of Judge Merrimon, as United States Senator, created both surprise and excitement, but everything promises to pass off quietly. The Radicals are jubilant at having defeated the nominee of the Conservative-Democratic Caucus, but the election of Judge Merrimon will do them no good.

Judge Merrimon assured me in person, in a conversation with him a few moments in no wise compromised.

He assured me that he had had no communication whatever, direct or indirect, in person or through others, with the Radical party or any members thereof, in relation to the Senatorial contest, that could affect his party relations; that if he considered that his election compromised his political principles, he would not accept the position. When the members of the Republican party voted for him, they did so knowing his past record and that he was still a Conservative.

In Alabama the Radicals elected the Governor and the Conservatives secured a majority in both branches of the Legislature. The Legislature assembled according to law, but the Radicals refused to meet with the Conservatives. Some of the latter were arrested by United States Marshals on their way to Montgomery to take their seats, in order to prevent an organization for want of a quorum. These gave bond, and a quorum being present the Legislature was duly organized in accordance with the laws of Alabama. Governor Lindsay, the retiring Governor, recognized them and sent in his message.

The Senate is the only tribunal which ide, by count, who is elected, : n i by that determination Mr. Brooks and his friends shall stand, or, in his own language, we will make this State a "howling rilderness from the Missouri border to the Red river." He and his friends may get up just as many meetings as they choose, for purpose of revolution; but they will find that such a man as General Fagan will no more draw his sword in a war for the inauguration of Brooks, than he would have drawn it in days gone gone by, because planter had refused to invite a negro is eyes are already open to their scheme, and that he declines to lead where Brooks is to follow. All that we ask of the riffraff is that place their leaders to the front, and with inhospitable hands we will welcome them to bloody graves. To the decigreat Railroad King, by which millions sion of the proper tribunal we will submit without a murmer; but to the inauguraion of Boooks by rebellion and violence, we never shall. We know, Brooks knows, and the people of this State know, that Brooks has not recieved a majority of legal votes of this State for the position to which he aspires, and he who attempts to place him there in the face of these facts had better commence now to make his peace

> It appears from this that the Brooks party must either acquiesce in the situation or "take up arms against a sea of troubles." Both branches of the Legislature are Radical, and the count of the vote will likely smack of the political bias of the counters. The Courts can't be appealed to with any hope of success. They are as Radical as veying convicts to the Penitentiary] Baxter or the Legislature. There is therefore, no other tribunal for the Liberals to appeal to but the god of battles; and unless milder counsels than those which have been hitherto accepted with such enthusiasm prevail, or unless the Federal Government interferes, it is likely that the muddle will end in anarchy and

In view of this state of facts throughout the South, we may well ask if the General Government guarantees to every State a Republican form of government? Will President Grant reply?

SENATE. SATURDAY, Nov. 30, 1872. On motion of Mr. Ellis, of Columbus the rules were suspended and the bill for the relief of D. J. Clark, late Sheriff of Bladen county, was put upon its passage, the question being on the substitute of the Committee on Propositions and Grievances. IIt seems that whilst engaged in collectng the taxes for 1871, Sheriff Clark deposited from time to time in the safe of a rominent firm in Elizabethtown (the usual place of deposit, there being no bank in that town) the sum of $3,227 of tax money; that on Sunday night of the first week of the tax collecting, the store in which the safe was kept was entered and the safe robbed of a large amount of money, including the Sheriff's deposit of $3,227, that since that time the Sheriff had made every effort, at considerable expense, to recover the stolen money. It further appeared that the safe in which the Sheriff eposited was the usual place for the business men of Bladen, and that the safe was considered fire and burglar proof. The committee to whom the bill was referred recommended that Sheriff Clark be allowed a credit in his settlement with the Treasurer of $1,000, and that all costs and fines

Mr. Greeley's Insanity. SICKNESS OF MRS. GREELEY.

Meanwhile Mrs. Greeley's health had been failing rapidly, and she had been removed from Chappaqua to this city. Mr. Alvin J. Johnson, of 323 West Fifty-seven h street, had placed a suite of apartments at her disposal. These the invalid occupied with her eldest daughter, Miss Ida, while Mr. Greeley had rooms in the same house.

It was there, while passing sleepless nights at the bedside of his dying wife, that Horace Greeley first began to show signs of great mental depression. On one occasion, while the opposition press was criticising his great October speech, he said, "If they make the issue that I'm the rebe candidate, I'm bound to be defeated.

This consideration seemed to weigh on his mind, and often when he supposed he was alone he would put his hand to his and though severely chafed by the accounts of them published in the New York Times, he still pursued his open air exercise. He talked one moment of offering the portfolio of Secretary of State to Mr. Charles Francis Adams, and in the next breath he would lament a large falling off in the subscription lists of the Tribune. Such outbursts of incoherent expressions, followed by paroxysms of rage, now became more quent and spontaneous. They came involuntary, as it were, and always excited anxious apprehensions among his friends; but they were attributed to the fact that he was too much deprived of sleep while watching beside his wife.

At length, on the morning of October 20, Mrs. Greeley died. When the widowed husband was informed of his wife's death he wrung his hands, cried like a child, and "Oh, why didn't you'let me sit up with her? Why did you send me to bed

Then he would violently criticise the course pursued by the opposi tion newspapers, and especially the mismanagement of the Tribune, and his fatal mistake in allowing his name to be used as a candidate for the Presidency.

Mr. Alvin J. Johnson was his most intinate friend. One evening, while holding his hand, Mr. Greeley said to him: "A J., do you know I made a terrible mistake about Mr. Dana. He was right about that On to Richmond. Yes, I am satisfied now that he was right about it."-Often after that, when he was unable to sleep, and while his disease was yet in its incipiency, Mr. Greeley would take Mr. Johnson to his room, and, with his hands clasped, he would impart to him the most

It was written under the supervision of Mr. Whitelaw Reid, who bad acted as editor and was inserted in the columns of the Tribune without Mr. Greeley's knowledge. Mr. Greeley hastened to the Tribune office. He there wrote a card denying his responsibility for the abusive article, and regretting its publication. WHAT MR. GREELEY TOLD COL. ALLEN. Colonel Ethan Allen, Chairman of the Mr. Greeley was conveyed last Thursday late National Liberal Republican Executive Committee, informs a Sun reporter that he had a long conversation with Mr. Greeley at the Tribune office soon after the election. The Colonel does not remember the exact date, but it was probably on the 8th of November. Colonel Allen says that during the election excitement in October he saw Mr. Greeley only at intervals, as he was constantly engaged in watching by his dying wife's bedside. When he entered Don't! On Wednesday, November 13th, Rufus F. Andrews was requested to meet Mr. Greeley at the house of a mutual friend in this city, in relation to a matter of business which personally concerned Mr. Greeley. "I went to the house," says Mr. Andrews, "and was ushered into Mr. Greeley's presence. When I first saw him I was greatly surprised at his personal appearance. Indeed I should scarcely have known him, so changed and emaciated was he, had I not understood that I was in his presence. I addressed him cheerfully and cordially, as in former times. He sat in a moody state, and at first made no response. I was shocked at receiving no answer, and pained at the indifference and hesitation which he manifested. I saw at once that something was wrong. Mr. Greeley rose household came into the room. He ushered me into an adjoining apartment, and there sat down. I comprehended what he desired, and teld him that I would endeavor to see that his wishes were complied with. I then added, "Mr. Greeley, you must not allow yourself to be de pressed by the various misfortunes which have come upon you. It is said that troubles never come singly, and I am sure you have recently had more than your share." Mr. Greelev then arose from his seat and left me, with the expression, "Rufus,

I felt convinced at the time, and so stated, that his case was hopeless, for he seemed so prostrated that I did not believe it possible for him to recover. I have not since seen Mr. Greeley. HIS MIND SEEMED GONE.

Mr. Sinclair and Mr. Geo. Ripley were in another room. Mr. Greeley slept for some time, but when at length he awoke his mind seemed gone. Mr. Sinclair begged him to remain thereof the Tribune during the political canvass, to go to bed. He quietly assented, and then, turning to Mr. Johnson, said, "A. J.,

He is a homecopathist, but kindly prescribed for his old friend, as he correctly imagined that he needed an anodyne. On returning home on the night above mentioned, Mr. Johnson mixed one or two powders and gave it to Mr. Greeley. The latter, it taking it, spilt half of it over his shirt front, and when reminded of what he had done, said, "Oh, never mind it; it's just as good out side as in. Hotese—After organization, the following resolution was adopted.

Mr. Dawes rose and said: "Mr. Speaker: believing that all will concur in the propriety of a public recognition of events so impressive and so without a parallel in the history of this Government that have recently transpired, I deem it proper to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives, in view of the recentdeath of Horace Greely, for whom at the late election more than three millions votes were cast for President, that a record be made in the Journals of Cengress of the appreciation for the eminent services and personal purity and worth of the deceased, and of the sad impression created by his death following a keen family bereavement. This resolution was unanimously adopted.

Synopsis of the President's Message WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.

After a short recess the President's message was, at 1:40, received and read. It commences was, at 1:40, received and read. It commences was, at 1:40, received and read. It commences with a recognition of the blessings which the American people have enjoyed within the past year, the only exception being the great fire in Boston. It refers to the Geneva Arbitrations and its satifactory results which left the two Governments, American and English, without a shadow on their friendly relations, which it is sincerely hoped may forever remain equally unclouded. It recommends the immediate creation of a Board of Commissioners to decide on the amounts to be paid to individuals. It compliments Mr. Adams and Mr. Baucroft for their emment services in the matter of the Geneva and the San Juan Arbitrations, the decision in the latter case leaving the United States for their first time without any question as to disputed boundaries. boundaries.

In regard to the fisheries, and to our relations with the British North America provinces, the President says that he has received notice that the Imperial Parliament and the Dominion the Imperial Parliament and the Dominion Government had passed laws to carry the provisions of the treaty of Washington into operation, and he therefore recommends the legislation of Congress in the same direction.

He speaks of the friendly relations of the United States and all the Governments of Europe. He reters to the Vienna International Exposition and recommends the fitting up of two National vessels to convey the goods of exhibitors to Trieste, and suggests that a proposition be maile to have the next great Exposition in this country in 1876, at the time of the centennial celebration in Philadelphia.

of the strife, and he thinks that the abolition of slavery and the institution of other reforms there, could not fail to advance the restoration of peace and order. It adds greatly to the hopes that the present liberal government of Spain will voluntarily adopt that view.

Referring to our relations with China and Japan, the President recommends provisions for maintaining four American youths in each of those countries as a part of the diplomatic family of ministers. family of ministers.

He gives details of he revenue received in the past year, and of the reduction to the amount of over $100,000,000 of the public debt. The Secretary of the Treasury reports also that a necessity exists for a new Issue of National Bank notes. The Secretary exonerates Assistant Treasurer Hillhouse from neglect of duty in the stamp divisions of the Assistant Treasury at New York. The Secretary again recommends the passage of a bill to amend and consolidate the National and customs collection laws of the United States. As the leading pursuits of the country are now extended. collection laws of the United States. As the leading pursuits of the country are now stronger than ever before in the possession of adequate capital and a supply of intelligent laborers, there may be a moderate reduction from time to time in the rate of duties, as the diminishing expenses of the Government shall permit, without either alarming capital or injuring trade. He says that the calculations of the Banks should be medified and limited, and that the power to change the volume of paper in circulations. power to change the volume of paper in circula-tion within the limits established by law should remain in the Department. A degree of ple-bleity in the volume of currency is essential remain in the Department. A degree of ple-bicity in the volume of currency is essential for two reasons: first, the business of the De-partment cannot be transacted properly if a limit is fixed and the power to raise the circu-lation above or reduce it below that is denied. Secondly, there is a necessity every Autumn for moving the crops without delay from the South and West to the seaboard, that they may be on hand for export and consumption as South and West to the seaboard, that they may be on hand for export and consumption as wanted. The problem is to find a way of increasing the currency, for moving the crops and diminishing it at once when that work is done; this is a necessary work, and inasmuch as it cannot be confided to the banks, the power should be reposed in the Treasury Department. Believing that the country is not prepared to sustain the policy of contraction the Secretary considers the means by which the value of our currency may be improved. The basis of a policy of improvement must be found in a sturdy refusal to add to the paper circulation until it is of the same value essentially as coin. This being accepted as the settled purpose of the country, there can be no permanent increase of the difference between paper and coin, and an opportunity will be given for the influence of external cases. can be no permanent increase of the difference between paper and coin, and an opportunity will be given for the influence of natural causes tending, upon the whole to a better financial condition. Living Advertisements. A medicine that has done more than all the prescriptions of the pharmacopæia to protect the human system against the bodily ills experiedneed by unhealthy surroundings, is certainly worthy of universal confidence. It is A medicine that has done more than all the tainly worthy of universal confidence. It is nor given any evidence of such intention.

MRS. ANNIE J. REGISTER. ventive properties that Hestetter's Stomach Bitters is so exceedingly popular to localities subject to the visitation of mlasmatic fevers and other diseases produced by empoisoned air. sickly season in consequence of using the Bitters as a safeguard, is a living advertisement of the virtues of the preparation. The whole A family that has escaped sickness during a the virtues of the preparation. The whole neighborhood realize the fact. "I couldn't have believed it," says one. "I scarcely credited the advertisements; but one must believe what one sees," says another. "It is the very thing we need in this unwholesome section of No. 17 South Front Street, country," remarks a third And the result is that the instinct of self-defense, the first law of nature, induce . three foorths of that community to obtain a supply of the great vegetable antidote before the next sickly season sets in. In winter, when the system requires extra vigor and e'asticity to enable it to baffle the effects of damp and cold, the Bitters will be found particularly serviceable. Rheumatism will not be apt to fasten upon museies and nerves that have been braced up by this excellent invigor. ant and nervine; nor will the severities of the season, which have such a disastrous effect on the pulmonary organs of the feeble and dellsate, be likely to exercise the same untoward influence in cases where the stomach and the external surface of the body (which always sympathizes with the digestive organs) have been toned and stimulated by a course of the restorative. The fits of Indigestion and irregularities of the bowels which proceed from sudden changes of weather may always be averted by a timely use of the Bitters.

DUTY OFF TEAS!

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY have business connections with all the principal ports of China and Japan, and Import their Teas direct from place of growth, thus, saying the consumer from 5 to 8 profits. It is now about 12 years since the Company was organized—and it has been a splendfd success from the very first. This was due to the fact that we imported and sold only

THE BEST AND PUREST GOODS, and distributed them to our customers in all parts of the United States, for one small profit only, between the Tea grower and the Tea consumer. We originate the system of supplying consumers in distant parts of the country with Teas, at New York cargo prices, on the club plan. And since we adopted this plan we have saved the people of this country MILLIONS OF DELLARS annually, in the cost of this stricle of every day necessity.
